

GOVERNOR IS OFF FOR HIS VACATION

Wilson Leaves for Bermuda, Where Next Four Weeks Will Be Spent.

POLITICS NOT WORRYING HIM

Not Invited to Taft's "Party," He Unburdens Mind With Limerick.

New York, November 16.—Out of the Atlantic, toward the southeast at a lively pace, Governor Woodrow Wilson, Democratic President-elect, was kept in touch by wireless this afternoon with the progress of the Princeton-Yale football game. The Governor, accompanied by his entire family, sailed at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Canadian steamer Bermudian, en route to Hamilton, Bermuda, where he will spend the next four weeks in securing what is likely to be his last long rest for many months.

The Governor had a lively time before starting. He tried to get in touch with President Taft at the latter's hotel, but failed. Then he went shopping. He wanted a new shirt, and proceeded to one of the noted department stores, where it took him only a few minutes to buy the article. He handed the girl a $5 bill and then waited and waited for his change, after the approved department store style.

"It's funny," he remarked, "that it takes more than twice as long to get what one buys as it does to buy it." Governor Wilson, when asked just before leaving on the Bermudian for details as to the tariff legislation which will be enacted at the extraordinary session of Congress which he will call on, or shortly after, April 15, said:

"I think that that subject is thoroughly disposed of for the present by my statement of yesterday."

Governor Wilson breakfasted at the Hotel Collingwood at 9 o'clock to-day and shortly afterward expressed a desire to call upon President Taft who was breakfasting at the Waldorf. The Governor had almost started on his way for the call when word was received that President Taft had already left the Waldorf and was on his way to a reception at the College of the City of New York.

"Why don't you go up to the reception, and meet the President there?" the Governor was asked. He replied with a smile, and this limerick:

"I'm not like the man so benighted, Who didn't know when he was sighted."

And went to a party.

And ate just as hearty.

As if he'd been really invited."

"Perhaps they didn't know I was to be in town to-day."

After he had paid a call upon Colonel E. M. House, former national committee man from Texas, who is ill at his home, 135 East Thirty-sixth Street, the Governor set out on foot to do his shopping.

He was recognized by many of the shoppers, and a crowd hovered close. He talked to the newspaper men of the merits of advertising while waiting for his change.

After luncheon he and his wife and his daughters wandered down to the pier.

"Nothing to say on politics," he said genially, when the newspaper men had cornered him. "My vacation has started, and business has ended for the time being. I ceased to worry about politics when I stepped on board the boat."

Governor Wilson has taken a cottage called Glen Cove at Salt Kettle, across the bay from Hamilton. He is taking his bicycle, and expects to loaf and exercise to his heart's content. He will arrive on Monday morning, and expects to stay until December 14.

Industrious Deck Walker.

On Board Steamship Bermudian, at Sea, November 16 (By Wireless).—

President-Elect Wilson has become prominent on this ship as one of the most industrious deck-walkers aboard. The passengers who lie upon their stateroom chairs reading the latest novels look up from their books to see a slim man with eyeglasses marching in front of them with his hands clasped behind his back and his eyes upon the blue horizon.

This afternoon, in the very forefront of those who shouldered their way to the bulletin board upon which is set forth, step by step, play by play, the progress of the team of Old Nassau and Yale, was the interested figure of this country for the next four years.

When he heard the game was a tie he turned from the board with the same expression of dissatisfaction that came to the youngest undergraduate watching the ticker returns in the Hotel Manhattan.

At the captain's table to-night at dinner, foremost amongst the storytellers was the Governor of New Jersey.

But although there shouldered for favorable positions at the table those whose eye aspect bespoke the office-seeker, the President-elect turned to the eager crowd a cold shoulder, and for the captain and those of his audience, whom he recognized as unbiased, he had the apt stories, and for them only, women seeking autographs. And to each of them he proved himself the courteous gentleman, signing their books with a word of good natured comment.

The photographers who clamored about the boat the moment she set sail for Bermuda, were all day clamorous upon the heels of Mr. Wilson. They snapped him as he paced up and down the deck. They took flashlight pictures to the consternation of the stewards as he entered his stateroom, and they caught him in the act of shaking hands with a young woman admirer.

Mr. Wilson went to his stateroom early, and refused himself to all callers. He said that he would be on deck early in the morning to enjoy the unique experience of a sunrise at sea.

WILSON-DAY PLANS GROWING IN SCOPE

Senators and Representatives May Review Parade and Make Speeches.

FLOATS CONTRACTED FOR

Many Attractions Next Week Will Bring Immense Crowd to City.

While no announcements have as yet been made by the committee on speakers of the state-wide Wilson celebration, it is believed to be probable that addresses at the City Auditorium will be made by some of Virginia's representatives in Congress. Acceptance will be had before the public is definitely advised.

It has been suggested that Senators Thomas S. Martin and Claude A. Bristow, with Representatives William A. Jones, E. E. Hoadland, John Lamb, Robert Turnbull and C. C. Corbin, with Congressmen-elect A. J. Montague and Walter A. Watson, which embrace the members of the lower house from the Eastern part of the State, could review the parade from the balcony of the Jefferson Hotel. Then, seated in automobiles to the City Auditorium, they could be given a few minutes to which to make addresses. All speeches will be strictly limited.

Floats Represented President. Contracts were made yesterday for the eight floats, each to represent one of the men born in Virginia who have been honored by the people of the United States with election to the presidency. A committee in this city will make all arrangements for the floats and supply vehicles and horses. The eight Presidents to be represented will be: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor and Woodrow Wilson.

Petersburg will get a special invitation from the committee to send a delegation to go to the Grand City the middle of this week, and invite the whole town to come over. It is believed most of the citizens will respond. Mayor Cameron and his personal staff will be given a tailride and will be expected to have a prominent place in the parade.

All Sorts of Attractions. There can be no question that Richmond is feeling one of the biggest crowds in her history. Next week will be one as thick full of good things that the people of Virginia will come early and stay most of the week. So many are the attractions offered that the railroads will embrace all in one general cut rate, giving reduced rates on one Monday and good times the following Sunday.

Count them up. The fun will open Tuesday night with the big show—the Wilson celebration. Everybody wants to see it. Thousands of out-of-town people will be here for that alone. Then, with the great meeting of the Virginia Educational Association, beginning Wednesday and lasting until Friday night, many more will be attracted. The teachers and other school people will come a day earlier to attend the jollification and witness the parade.

The Philharmonic Orchestra's concert comes Wednesday night, an added attraction. Then there is the football games Thursday, and the automobile races Friday and Saturday. No wonder that the railroads have thrown up the sponge and have issued blanket invitations to everybody to buy cheap tickets and come to Richmond.

Everybody Will Parade.

Every hour the parade gets bigger. Business people in bunches are asking for places. Concerns possessing many wagons will have them all in line, appreciating the value of this advertising feature. The business part of the procession will be immense. All military organizations will be represented in line. Captain W. M. Myers, chairman of this committee, expects to have the entire militia force of Richmond out. To this will be added the Boys' Brigade and the cadets of the Benedictine College.

Invitations are being sent out to the men honored with appointment as marshals. As an inducement to them to serve, they are promised a horse, a cash and a badge each. Chairman Frank Ferrandini expects to have his list of marshals ready for publication soon.

A meeting of the committee on balls, John H. Purcell, chairman, will be held Tuesday night at Wilson Day headquarters, 505 East Broad Street.

Merit Counts in Shoes

Nothing shows more plainly than quality in a Shoe after a few weeks' wear—the underlying point in a Hofheimer Shoe in the quality of leather and standard of workmanship—which insures a shoe that will hold its shape and look good when worn comparatively out. Besides the price is always a little lower for the class of footwear than found elsewhere.

BOTH SIDES FEEL PULSE OF COUNCIL

Stronger Faction to Rush Vote on Street Railway Franchise.

It was common gossip on the streets that a meeting of the City Council will be called Wednesday night for the final consideration of the Richmond and Northern Railway Company franchise, which rendered a decision adverse to the application for franchise after a stormy meeting last Monday afternoon. The report stated that the franchise was rejected by the committee because of looseness in its construction, and that the franchise, as it stood, was not acceptable to the city. The supporters of the Richmond and Northern were canvassing yesterday to obtain a line on how the Council would vote should the question be put to the call Wednesday night.

The result of the polls taken by the two sides can only be surmised; there is no reliable source of information as to how Council members actually stand on the proposition. The opponents of the franchise can count on at least five votes, the five members of the Street Committee who rejected the application in committee. Beyond that there is no way of telling how the vote will line up. Both sides express a confidence that seems unable to stand the strain of calling the meeting Wednesday night.

One point stands out clearly, the franchise will be put to the test in all probability this week. The debatable point is: Which side polled eleven votes yesterday?

Pay Tax on Greenback. Attorney-General Samuel W. Williams ruled yesterday that United States Treasury notes are not exempt from taxation in Virginia. It is not believed anybody thought they were, but the official was asked for his judgment in the matter.
